INFRASTRUCTURE FINANCE LEAGUE TABLES

A global view of infrastructure activity – H1 2017

With H1 2017 in the rear-view mirror, IJGlobal takes a look back over a successful first half

BANKS

JPMorgan tops the global MLA table for infrastructure finance thanks to two massive corporate finance tickets, the largest of which was a $3.9 billion slice of Cenovus' acquisition of ConocoPhilips' midstream assets in Western Canada.

The same deal propelled fellow lender RBC, which took the same accreditation from that financing, to second in the table. Even without participating on that acquisition, the Canadian bank significantly increased its overall lending from just $897 million in H1 2016 to more than $6 billion in the most recent half-year.

Both these lenders are traditionally stronger in capital markets rather than as MLAs, and like this time last year are the top two in terms of deal count globally as bond arrangers. Though both have had a strong recent six months, JPMorgan was the exceptional performer in the half-year, doubling the number of bonds it worked on compared to H1 2016 and increasing its total arranging accreditation by more than $10 billion.

In terms of deal count, the big two Japanese banks were split at the top of the global MLA table by ING Group, which concluded 58 deals during the half. Though more than half of these transactions were in its domestic European market, the Dutch lender has impressively managed to close on projects in every region and across multiple sectors over the last six months.

LAW FIRMS

Lawyers are often keen to point out that the number of mandates won by a firm is a better indication of success than the total value of corresponding project financing. On that basis, Latham & Watkins was the top performing law firm in H1 2017, with 38 projects it advised on reaching financial close. It also had the most improved performance of any of the major global law firms, rising from 9th to 1st compared to the same period last year.

Latham & Watkins' power and renewables professionals can feel particularly smug with themselves: 24 of the firms deal were in those sectors, the majority of which were in its domestic US market. Of those, the Moapa Southern Paiute Solar project was of particular significance: it represents institutional investor AllianzGI's first debt deal in US solar.

Of the other big hitting law firms, Allen & Overy had a disappointing half. At this time last year it had advised on 47 deals to reach financial close, while this year it has managed only 28. The biggest slowdown came in transport: the firm had just six deals in this sector close this year compared to 15 in H1 2016.

ADVISERS

The UK renewables market may have been slowed by regulatory uncertainty in recent times, and in some ways overtaken by neighbouring markets in continental Europe, but at least one UK-based renewables specialist is thriving. RNA Consulting (formerly OST Energy) more than doubled the number of closed deals it advised on for the period, compared to H1 2016, to top the technical advisers chart for deal count.

Engineering consultancy RNA has benefitted from gaining a foothold in the flourishing Australian renewables market (four of its 11 deals in H1 2017 were in this sector and region). Its largest deal of the year-to-date has been the $355 million financing of Wirsol's Whitsunday, Hamilton and Gannawarra PV solar project in Australia.

Corporate America

Huge corporate financings in North America push it ahead of other regions, but small proves beautiful in Europe

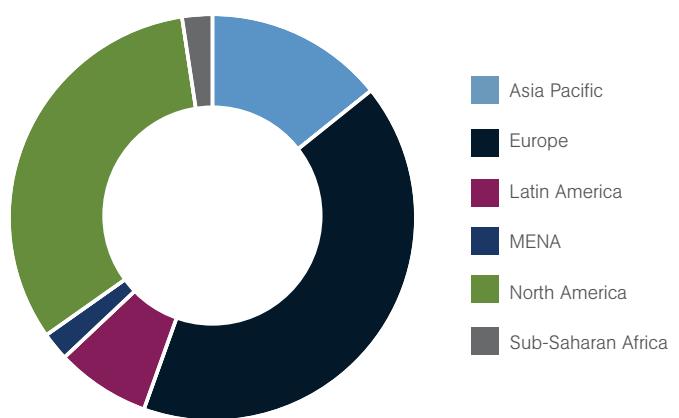

A collection of mammoth corporate financing facilities that closed in North America during the period meant that it was by far the largest region for infrastructure finance by value in H1 2017. The top three deals of the half (the acquisition of 50% of ConocoPhillips's Canadian assets, the Verizon bond facility and sale of Royal Dutch Shell's Canadian Oil Sands) were all North American and alone totalled $32 billion. North America saw more than $174 billion of deals close in H1, compared to Europe's roughly $107 billion.

But Europe was by far the most active market in terms of deal volumes: there were 275 European deals in the half compared to North America's 216. Only one European deal in the period was larger than $5 billion in size (Quad Gas Group's acquisition of a 61% stake in the UK's National Grid Gas), and the average deal size in the region was just $412 million, lower than in Asia ($532 million), Latin America ($636 million) and MENA ($1.11 billion).

Powered by clean/dirty energy

The renewables market continues to grow, but most infrastructure investment is still ploughing into power and oil & gas

By the end of March 2017, the power and oil & gas sectors had swallowed up just over half of the total infrastructure finance market by value. At the end of H1, those sectors had accounted for the vast majority of investment in the market (more than $3.8 trillion, while all the other sectors combined totalled just over $1 trillion). Much of this dominance was due to a rush of M&A deals: there were 14 power or oil & gas acquisition amounting to more than $2 billion in value closed during the period.

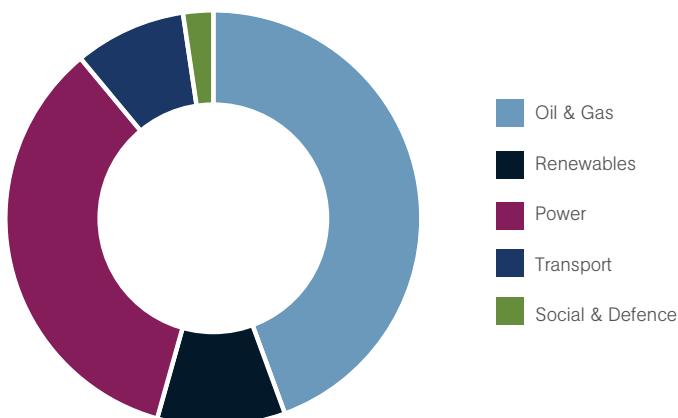

Climate change deniers shouldn't be popping champagne corks at this news however. This growth in investment in dirty fuel assets does not represent a rejection of the dangers of global warming by investors. Instead it is symptomatic of the ongoing rise of renewables.

Companies are shedding fossil fuel assets to diversify their investment base, and renewables are positively booming. Although requiring much smaller capital expenditure, renewable energy transactions are far more numerous than deals in other sectors. In H1, 253 renewables transactions closed, compared to 105 oil & gas, and 108 power deals. And renewables transactions are growing in size. In April, ArcLight Capital Partners acquired a US hydro power portfolio from TransCanada for more than $1 billion.

Refis' revenge

Refinancings are becoming an increasingly integral part of the project finance market, with large greenfield deals dispersed about the globe

While primary financing activity was limited during the first half of 2017, sizable project finance deals still closed across the world. Each region saw a PF deal pipeline of at least $1.9 billion close during the period, and many of these were greenfield transactions.

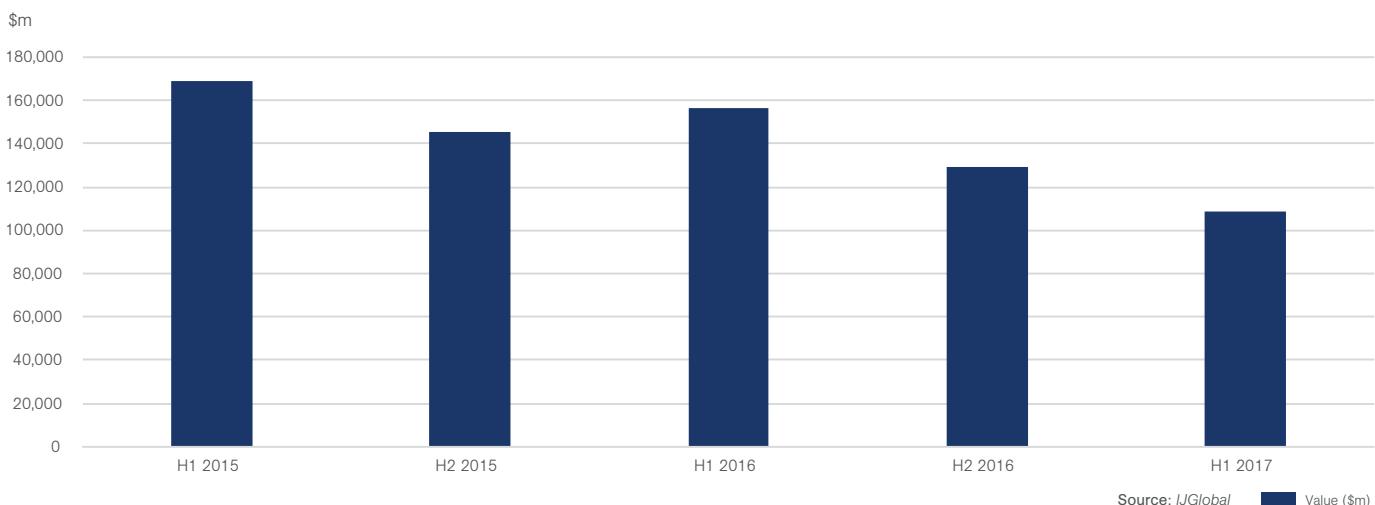

Indonesia stood out for getting two coal-fired power plants with a combined generating capacity of 3GW to financial close for a total investment of $6.3 billion.

Despite some sizable primary financings during the period, on a global basis this market is still depressed on historic comparisons, largely due to a lack of activity in Europe. M&A was also less lively compared to the last couple of half-years, whereas refinancings are now making up a sizable proportion of the overall market.

Refinancings made up around 28% of the total project finance market in H1 2017, compared to just 15% of the market in H2 2016, and 20% for the first half of last year. Primary financings represented just 65% of all project finance transactions in H1 2017, which is its lowest share of the market for any half year period since H1 2015.

Primary not priority in Europe

Asia and the Middle East punch above their weight on primary financings, while Europe ramps up on refis

The largest project financing transaction to close in Europe during the first half of 2017 was the $1.93 billion acquisition of 67% of the M6 in the UK. Every other region saw a larger transaction than the M6 close during the period, underlining the paucity of project finance opportunities in Europe at present.

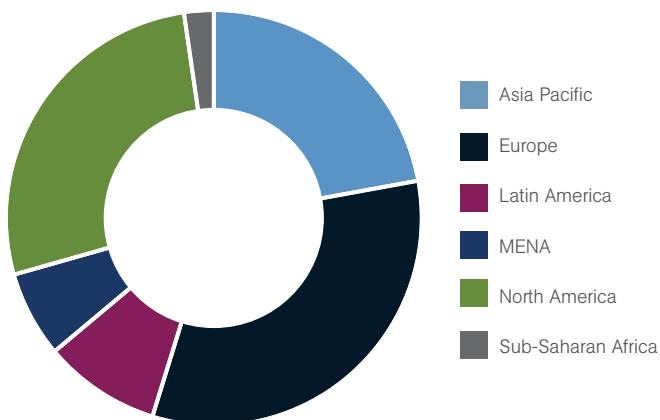

Of the 137 project financings that closed in Europe during the half, just 57 were primary financings. In most other regions, greenfield deals are the bulk of the market and – even in North America – acquisitions and refinancings only make up around half the activity. Market participants in Europe continue to bemoan the lack of greenfield opportunities, and this situation is unlikely to change in upcoming league table reports.

However, the European refinancing market is very busy. Of the 75 refis closed in H1 2017, 54 of them were in Europe, creating a release value for all that pent up debt capital.

In contrast to Europe, greenfield activity is much healthier in the Middle East, where an increased interest in renewables has helped revive what has been a sleepy power market in recent years. Asia too has seen power market activity pick up, with Indonesia pushing through some long-delayed deals and Pakistan closing on some sizable hydro projects.

Renewables – more than half the market

The majority of project finance transactions now reaching financial close are in renewable energy space

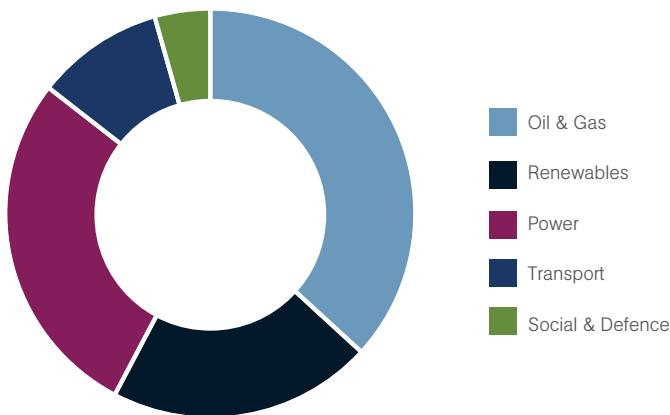

Solar and wind project financings became so ubiquitous in the first half of 2017 that they represented well over half of all the deals to reach financial close. Of the close to 300 transactions captured by the IJGlobal league tables, 178 were in the renewables sector.

Power and oil & gas were still the largest sectors in terms of the total value of transactions, but the ever-increasing size of renewable energy developments has closed that gap too. Huge, sprawling solar developments are in vogue in the Middle East, a trend exemplified by the $940 million financing for the 800MW third phase of the Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum solar complex in Dubai.

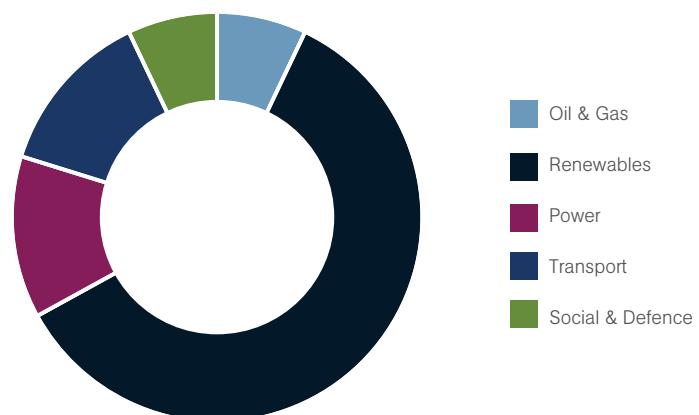

Renewables continues to be one area where Europe is leading the way, with three financings (all connected to wind developments or portfolios) closed in the region for more than $1 billion.

Transport was one sector to see huge declines during the first half of 2017. The IJGlobal league tables captured only 39 project financings for transport deals across the globe in the period, significantly lower than in recent half-years. The largest primary financing for a transport project in H1 was the $1.5 billion transaction for the Moorebank Intermodal Terminal PPP in Australia.
